

A NEW FRENCH PLANE WITH VARIABLE WINGS—Built like the folding wings of a bird and controlled by the pilot while in flight, they consist of three surfaces, two of which slide on a center one. With the extended wing surface speed in the air is reduced from 200 kilometers to a low landing speed of 60 kilometers.

THE VOLCANO MUSHROOM IN ACTION. One of the strangest and most interesting of all Mother Nature's children is the Lycoperdon. At a tender age it is deliciously edible, but, growing older, loses its gastronomic appeal. By the time it reaches pension age it is so doggedly rambunctious that, should the midday sun find the top of its bald head, it just up and busts itself, as shown in our picture.

Right — AMERICA'S OLDEST APARTMENT HOUSE. One of the most interesting sights for the motor tourist in our Southwest are the 20,000 ancient cliff dwellings in Frijoles Canyon, New Mexico — relics of a civilization older, perhaps, than that of ancient Egypt. Our picture shows a tourist about to take the air on the roof of one of these hundreds of years-old apartment houses that has been restored for use as an observation point.

Right — "MY, HOW HE'S GROWN!" This weird, long-legged, close-coupled speed demon of the animal kingdom, which looks like a cross between a giraffe and a collic, hails from South America, is a recent addition to the London Zoo, and is known as the "Ghost Fox."

Left — "I PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE!" Boy Scouts the world over must swear allegiance to the flag as part of their code. Here's a lad of Denmark instructing a German war orphan, who has been adopted by a Danish family, in the first duty of a Scout — that of loyalty to country and to the flag.

HITTING THE PIPE ON PICCADILLY. The London shopper in this picture goes her New York sisters who are devotees of the paper pills of Lady Nicotine one better, however, and not only substitutes a briar for the cigarette, but nonchalantly enjoys it as she strolls along the street.
